

August Pattern of the Month

S is for Seashells, T is for (sea) Turtles

Every once in a while, two letters and their imagery just come together nicely. So If anyone out there wants to challenge me on this month's choices, we can play tiddlywinks. Of course, that means someone has to know how to play tiddlywinks.

Doing all these letters has also brought back all kinds of memories of things I've enjoyed. Several years ago, at a family wedding in Baja, I went shell collecting along the tideline, and found a very small sand-dollar, less than two inches across. I still have it with some of the other shells I collected that day.

As for Sea Turtles, there is an English movie from 1985 (I looked it up) called Turtle Diary. It's about two shy people who meet at the London Zoo, become friends, and decide to release the sea turtles back to the wild. Then of course there are the hippy sea turtles in Finding Nemo, so I guess I'm not the only one who likes them.

Enlarge either pattern to 150% for a ten-inch block

